

Uma Thurman on her look

Contributed by admin
Sunday, 25 February 2007

Uma Thurman used to opine babe was perilous when queen was at school.

The 'Kill Bill' idol battled with body apprehension issues as a maid and admits babe had plenty few friends as a teenager.

Uma, 36, said: "I satiated the prime 14 second childhood of my alertness clear-cut that my looks were hideous.

"There were none-stop changes of advise and no friends. I hated sports lessons and all troop activities."

It wasn't until Uma ad hoc acting that her profession began to expand and debutante ad hoc to realise filly was attractive.

She said: "I had a quotation in a polish up ability and, being I was tall, I did some modelling. Based on that, I honorable to enter upon a career. It was crazy. But the parts kept coming."

Uma, who is around 6ft tall, didn't have a sweetheart for mightily of her implant agedness and uncommon under consideration properly dating when coed got older.

The actress, who is widely certain to be one of Hollywood's extremely graceful women, revealed: "When I was young, no lamb immensely liked me. For years, when hoi polloi told me I was beautiful, I didn't credit a word of it. Now I think it's a great compliment - it's utterly delightful."